Mr. Goodman:

A substitute specification for my cabbage cutter invention (Application No. 09/025,896) is enclosed. I have tried to make all the required corrections. Sections have been rephrased for informative and descriptive clarification.

A marked-up copy of the original specification filed February 18, 1998 is enclosed. The deleted parts are enclosed in brackets with the corrected and added parts immediately following.

Please cancel claim 2 and substitute claim 3.

A statement as to the lack of new matter under 37 CFR1.125(b) has been included in this substitute specification. Details that may have been construed as new matter, since they were not introduced in the original specification filed February 18, 1998, have been deleted, for example, the specific dimensions of the body and cap and the specific materials used in the construction of the cabbage cutter. Although, in the original specification, I did describe the cabbage cutter as comprising a metal cylinder and a cap (hand grip) made of rubber or plastic. Initially, I intended for the cabbage cutter's cylindrical body and closed top to be constructed of stainless steel and that is why I included that material in the previous substitute specification because I had mentioned metal in the original specification, regarding stainless steel as a metal. Since stainless steel was not mentioned in the original specification, and I thought that it may be construed as new matter, I have reverted back to the metal cylinder. The materials used is important to emphasize the strength and durability of the cabbage cutter because cabbage is such a difficult vegetable to cut up.

I believe I have eliminated all the vague and indefinite terms.

Again, I appreciate your assistance. Thank you.
